Rule for Deleted Items I am being told that there is a rule in place on my Exchange server that will not empty the deleted items folder every 30 days for certain users in my organization.

I found a recipient policy in System Manager that says 'Users Excluded from Mailbox Cleanup' but it only shows 2 users and not the 3 I was told about.

microsoft.com wrote in message ne How to Recover Deleted Sent Mail? While trying to delete very old 'Sent' mail I seem to have deleted all 'Sent' mail.. I want to remove the subreport but for the life of me can't figure out how to do it.. sounds like a style is messed up if the 'outdent' can't be changed using the Decrease indent button (next to the alignment b. For the second, click the control once, then set How to open Excel sheet with more than 64000 lines I am using Office 2002, and have received Excel files with greater than 64000 line items.. Is there a way of recovering this mail? Have you closed Outlook since deleting the old sent mail? <http://www..howto-outlook.com/howto/restoredelimiteditemsfromanoutlookpst.htm> might help Next time, archive the items you want removed from your active.. Up to now I wasn't able to figure out how to reset that indent configuration Any ideas? Thanks in advance for your help. download Opening Mbp Files

For that you would need Excel 2007 -- David Biddulph 'mgoehring' <mgoehring@discussions.. But I have confirmed that the missing person has email in her deleted items folder going back to 2005 so it must be working.. Cannot delete subreportI am using Access 2003 and have a report I did a while back with a simple subreport.. That applies to editing mails as well as displaying mails in a separate window and in reading pane.. Is there a way , or an update, with Excel 2002 to open files this large? You need to upgrade to Excel 2007.
